"United Way Chief Shifts Blame To Ford"

Iowa Bystander publisher Jerald Brantley met with Shannon Cofield of the United Way to discuss the West Side Boxing Club closing. Ms. Cofield provided Iowa Bystander the below letters and copies of two budgets, ironically with the same date on them (see pages six and seven.)

The letters below were provided to our paper and The Register with the intent of shifting anger from United Way to Rep. Wayne Ford. Ms. Cofield’s point, Ford wanted Westside Boxing Club funds for another program of his and was okay with defunding the long standing club.

Iowa Bystander would like to extend an opportunity to Rep. Ford to respond to Ms. Cofield’s letters, budgets and implications supplied to Iowa Bystander.

Dear Mr. Beanum,

Thank you for your letter dated February 17, 2009. Urban Dreams and West Side Boxing Club had a very long history. Edgar Young, who passed the Executive Director of West Side Boxing Club for over three decades. In the mid-1990s, I had the pleasure to serve on Edgar’s Board.

At the funeral of Edgar Young, I made a commitment to do everything possible to keep Edgar’s West Side Boxing Club open. Martha Wilcox, who was President of United Way at the time, concurred with my position. I am sure we can work together to benefit the residents in Des Moines Westside.

Over the past several years, it has been increasingly difficult for Urban Dreams to establish a relationship between the goals of Westside Boxing and United Way’s strategies with education and mental health.

United Way, at this time, made me aware that the supports in West Side Boxing were not in total alignment with United Way’s mission. About several years of this, and after watching the Des Moines Police Department implement an East Side boxing program, I recognize that this has come the Urban Dreams and United Way to further our efforts toward your alignment.

I understand there is no guarantee United Way will fund the Urban Dreams Dropout Re-engagement Program, but I am sending this letter and informing that I look forward to seeing your alignment.

Thank you for any consideration you give my request.

Sincerely,
Wayne Ford
Publisher & Executive Director of Urban Dreams

Dear Wayne:

As we look forward to receiving materials from Urban Dreams for the 2009-10 investment year, we would like to acknowledge your efforts toward greater alignment with United Way of Central Iowa’s impact areas of Education, Income, and Health.

As we have collaboratively discussed your programs over the past several months, we understand that you are considering to discontinue the West Side Boxing program. As that program is discontinued, we also acknowledge that Urban Dreams intends to request re-programming of the West Side Boxing to another program.

While we cannot make any guarantees regarding the re-programming of funds, it seems reasonable for Urban Dreams to pursue funding in a new direction. Over the past several years, it has become increasingly difficult for Urban Dreams to establish a relationship between the successes of West Side Boxing and United Way’s strategies within education and mental health.

We support the direction that Urban Dreams is working toward and would consider a request to re-program funds received from United Way of Central Iowa. The decision regarding funding will be made by our Investment Committee volunteers, along with the consideration of all other funding requests for 2009-10. While there is still the risk to Urban Dreams that the funding requested to be re-programmed would be awarded to another provider, it seems reasonable for Urban Dreams to make a request that would more strategically align with our strategies and indicators.

Sincerely,

Nicole Beanum

I regard the Klan, the Anglo-Saxon clubs and White American societies, as far as the Negro is concerned, as better friends of the race than all other groups of hypocritical whites put together.

I have no desire to take all black people back to Africa; there are blacks who are no good here and will likewise be no good there.
New Leadership

[Note: This column originally appeared in the July 4, 2008, edition of Iowa Bystander.]

New Leadership: There is a theory that leadership has certain traits or personal characteristics, and skills which contribute to effective leadership. The traits motives and other characteristics of leaders are: Personality, (1) self-confidence, (2) humility, (3) trustworthiness, (4) extraversion, (5) assertiveness, (6) emotional stability, (7) enthusiasm, (8) sense of humor, (9) warmth, and (10) high tolerance for frustration.

Task accomplishments are also closely associated with personality traits. These are: (1) Passion for the work and the people, (2) emotional intelligence, (3) flexibility and adaptability, (4) internal locus of control, and (5) courage. Now emotional intelligence is composed of four other traits that we must also know and understand. They are: Self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, and relationship management.

Leadership has certain motivating factors that need to be present in a person calling themselves a leader. These are: (1) The power to motivate, (2) drive and achievement motivation, (3) a strong work ethic, and (4) tenacity.

Rep. J.C. Watts, Oklahoma Republican, touched many a raw nerve, especially the Rev. Jesse Jackson’s, when he recently referred to certain people as “race-hustling poverty pimps.” Ron Freeman, executive director of the Freedom Foundation, has set out to identify the “Anatomy of a Race-hustling Poverty Pimp.”

1. Its primary purpose is to accuse others of racism.
2. It believes every social ill can be traced to racial injustices of the past.
3. It will viciously attack a person of its own ethnic group who dares to disagree.
4. It supports expanding government dependency.
5. It demands a vote for the Democrat, no matter what he or she stands for.
6. It hates Justice Clarence Thomas.
7. It supports Louis Farrakhan.
8. It believes that being black means to be a victim.
9. It believes that all white people are members of a sinister conspiracy to destroy blacks.
10. It represents people that totally disagree with it.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Hundreds packed a huge hall at the Morial Convention Center to hear from comedian, activist and educator Dr. William Cosby, a featured speaker at the Essence Music Festival's annual gathering of leaders charged with finding solutions to problems facing urban America.

Cosby, who's often criticized for his scolding tone when discussing ills facing the African American community, was warmly received, drawing applause and other positive reactions throughout his nearly 90-minute conversation.

Moderator Wendy Wilson, editor of Essence.com, noted that statistics show that every school day, some 7,000 children drop out. “Are you sure it’s every day?” Cosby asked, as audience members laughed. “Because if you go from September to July, at that rate, we’d have no one left to teach.”

Using his trademark story-telling humor, Cosby said curbing the nation’s drop out rate starts with educators who love what they do.

He asked the audience if they remember Mr. So-and-So or Ms. Whoever, who taught them biology or algebra and they didn’t want that teacher because “they gave too much work” but then “you were crying tears after graduating from that class, thanking that teacher for giving them so much work.”

“Our children need us,” he said. “We’ve got to get people into the system who want to teach. We need principals who want to train teachers. In the name of God, or anyone else you believe in, 420 students need more than one counselor. Our children deserve better.”

“Those who are teachers, don’t give up,” Cosby implored. “This is your civil rights issue now.”

Cosby also touched on the tendency of some in the community to “play the blame game” instead of searching for a solution to whatever problem was at hand.

“If something bad is happening in the community, why do we just keep on talking about it?” he said. “We’ve got to get our people to believe in themselves again, to value themselves and stop waiting for Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton to fix it.”

Eric Wesson, of Kansas City, Mo., said he thought Cosby’s comments were on point.

“I think he did a phenomenal job bringing issues we face daily to the forefront,” he said. “I also think he may have been preaching to the choir because most of those in this arena already have a bit of social consciousness and the question remains on whether they can take it back to the community. He was more of a motivator in that regard, to get people out and working in the community.”

The town hall’s host, political commentator Roland Martin, gave the audience homework assignments, asking them to write down one thing they would do over the course of the next year to fix a problem in their home town.

“How do we move forward with the issues facing our community? What will you do to change where you live?” he said.

Regina Sair, of Gilbert, Ariz., said Cosby was interesting as always. “I think his reiterating that we’ve got to do it on our own really hit home and he was able to make his point using humor,” she said.

Benjamin Todd Jealous, national president and chief executive of the NAACP, also addressed the crowd and asked for their help in tackling issues facing America, among them, universal health care, racial profiling, the No Child Left Behind act and unions for small businesses.

“We need your help,” he said.
Steve McNair came off the bench in the first game of his freshman season and rallied Alcorn State to a victory against Grambling State. So began one of the great careers in the history of college football.

McNair, who was shot and killed earlier this month in Nashville, brought big-time football to Lorman, Miss. He attended Alcorn State, about a 2 1/2-hour drive from his hometown of Mount Olive, because he wanted to play quarterback instead of defensive back. That’s where the marquee programs wanted him to play.

Alcorn State coach Cardell Jones was happy to bring a talent such as McNair into the Southwestern Athletic Conference. The plan was to ease McNair into college football.

McNair had other plans. "I was going to try to work him in slowly in preseason practice," the now-retired Jones said in telephone interview with the AP from his home in Raymond, Miss. "I finally put him in a scrimmage and he was fantastic. He went 9 for 9 (passing) and drove the team to a touchdown." Jones didn’t start McNair in the first game of the season against Grambling State in 1991. But with the Braves down, McNair got his chance and the youngster delivered like a veteran, throwing three touchdown passes in a 27-22 victory.

"He was mature at a very young age," Jones said. "I put Steve into the football game, he was very poised and took the team down to score the winning touchdown."

McNair took over the starting job and didn’t relinquish it until he was done rewriting the NCAA record book, making a run at the Heisman Trophy, and turning an historically black school in rural Mississippi into a college football hotbed.

"That was great and he really took our program to another level," Jones recalled. "I think we were on TV seven times."

Despite all the attention, including a cover story in Sports Illustrated, McNair stayed humble, Jones said. "He did a great job. He didn’t let that change him one iota. He kept his feet on the ground," Jones said. "He was truly a team player and, because of that, all of the players really loved him. They knew he would sacrifice and do the type of things thing to make the team successful."

In 1994, McNair had 5,799 total yards in 11 games, still a Division I-AA (now known as Football Championship Subdivision) record. He finished third in the Heisman Trophy balloting behind Colorado running back Rashaan Salaam and Penn State running back Ki-Jana Carter.

"Coaching Steve was definitely the highlight of my coaching career," said the 65-year-old Jones. "He’s the type ballplayer who comes along once in a lifetime."
TV One To Begin Sunday Show Aimed At Blacks

NEW YORK (AP) - Roland Martin will anchor a new Sunday public affairs show aimed at a black audience that will debut in September on the TV One network.

The “Washington Watch” program aims to tap into a new interest in politics and government due to the election of President Barack Obama, said Johnathan Rodgers, TV One’s president and CEO. It debuts Sept. 27 at 11 a.m. EDT, and the show will be repeated each week at 5 p.m.

Martin, who is also a CNN commentator, will interview newsmakers and members of the Congressional Black Caucus. April Ryan, White House correspondent for the American Urban Radio Networks, and Robert Traynham, Philadelphia Tribune column and Comcast host, will be regular panel members.

TV One is in about 48 million homes, a little less than half of the nation’s TV homes.

Rodgers said it dawned on him when TV One covered last year’s Democratic convention and he saw many Black Caucus members trudge up to the network’s temporary rooftop studio for interviews: These politicians have few outlets to talk about their issues and people have few places to hear them.

“I hope to get smart, intelligent, entertaining conversation,” Rodgers said. “But I put this under the public affairs arena. It doesn’t have to be a ratings success.”

Despite the election of the nation’s first black president, many of TV One’s older viewers - the network tends to get an older audience than competitor BET - wonder whether his administration will actively push a civil rights agenda and other issues that interest them, he said.

“Barack Obama is truly the American president,” Rodgers said. “He is not the white American president or the black American president. He is our president. A number of our viewers might have had a different expectation.”

Martin said he hoped the show would reflect the state of black America every week.

While the show is Washington-based, he said the concerns of people across the country would be reflected. He said he hopes to have viewers participate in the shows by suggesting questions and topics.

“We want to be bottom up,” he said. “The problems I see right now from so many of these shows is that they are top down - these are the things that we think are important.”

Rodgers said he initially wanted the show to first air in the late afternoon or evening, to distinguish it from the crowded field of Sunday morning public affairs shows. But he was advised that premiering “Washington Watch” at that hour during football season would be suicidal.

Should Tiger Save The World Or Just Save Par?

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP-Sports Columnist

Tiger Woods has a lot on his mind these days. For the first time in four years he’s not holding a major title, and this week he’ll play the British Open on a course he’s never seen.

Earlier this month he won the tournament he helped found and serves as the host.

Tying to be the greatest golfer ever is a tough business. There’s no room for mistakes and, with each passing major championship, it becomes more difficult, at least statistically, to pass the record of 18 major titles won by Jack Nicklaus.

The reason why Woods even has a chance is that he’s so focused, so single-minded. He doesn’t just play golf, he works at it.

He lost a shot at the U.S. Open because he couldn’t make any puts. He’s making almost everything he looks at this week, but only because he spent countless hours in between refining his stroke on the putting green.

Former football great Jim Brown surely appreciates that. He didn’t become the player he was by taking shortcuts, either.

What Brown doesn’t appreciate is that Woods doesn’t seem to be burdened by much of a social conscience. He thinks Woods should be doing more - far more - than just playing golf and making money.

He believes that Woods’ quest for greatness comes with a responsibility the greats take on.

“You know what’s so interesting about Tiger to me?” Brown said. “He is a killer, he will run over you. But as an individual for social change? Terrible. Terrible. Because he can get away with teaching politics.

"You know what’s so interesting about Tiger to me?” Brown said. “He is a killer, he will run over you. ... But as an individual for social change? Terrible. Terrible. Because he can get away with teaching politics.

But as an individual for social change?

Brown made the comments on HBO’s “Real Sports,” and Woods was still excluding blacks like it did in the past it surely would have been different for Woods.

“Times have changed, and the issues are now different. Things like the lack of women members at Augusta National just don’t seem so important compared to societal changes of the past, though if the club was still excluding blacks like it did in the past it surely would have been different for Woods.”

So Woods treads carefully and goes on with his quest to become the greatest golfer ever. That’s not going to change, and it’s not likely Brown’s slap on the wrist will suddenly prompt him to begin speaking from his bully pulpit.

Because while Brown may want him to save the world, Woods seems more concerned with just trying to save par.
Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God.

Iowa Department of Transportation FY2010 DBE Goal

To comply with 49 CFR part 26.45, the Iowa Department of Transportation establishes its overall Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE) goal based on the availability of ready, willing, and able DBEs, within Iowa, relative to the availability of all ready, willing, and able businesses within the same industry (hereafter, this proportion is referred to as “the relative availability of DBEs”). Establishing the overall DBE goal involves two primary steps:

1. Determining a base figure for the relative availability of DBEs.
2. Examining evidence in the state to determine what adjustments, if any, are necessary to the base figure to arrive at the overall goal.

The Iowa Department of Transportation is using the same methodology to determine our FY 2010 DBE Goal that was utilized for our FY 2009 DBE Goal. Based on this methodology, the Iowa Department of Transportation has set the following DBE participation goals:

- 4.60% for Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) funds
- 0.00% for Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) funds
- 0.03% for Federal Transit Administration (FTA) funds

The proposed goal and the rationale upon which it is based will be available for public inspection during normal business hours at the Iowa Department of Transportation’s Office of Contracts for thirty days following the first date of this public official notice. The Iowa Department of Transportation and the U.S. DOT will accept comments about the goals for 45 days from the first date of this public notification. The following addresses will be provided to the public for inspecting information and mailing comments:

Queen Latifah’s Latest Rap Album Drops In August

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Queen Latifah, in New Orleans for the 15th annual Essence Music Festival, says she’s excited about her latest project - her first rap album in a decade that will be released in August.

Entitled “Persona,” she says the release includes influences from rock, dance, reggae and “of course, plenty of straight up hip-hop.”

“It’s a rocker, it’s a rocker for sure,” she said Friday, the festival’s first day. “I can’t wait to put it out and perform for everybody and get in the minds of those who’ve come to know me only as an actor and to kind of deliver something to those who know me as a rapper, turned actress, turned entrepreneur.”

Latifah also says she wants to bring back the female voice to hip-hop.

“I think there’s a huge deficit out there,” said the now 39-year-old who entered the industry at age 17. “I don’t think it’s ever been this male-dominated since I started making music. For me, part of the mission is to get out there again and be a platform to up-and-coming female artists who aren’t getting their voices heard right now.”

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) - President Robert Mugabe described the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs as "an idiot" after an acrimonious meeting between the two at an African summit in Libya. Zimbabwe's state media reported Monday.

The state Herald newspaper carried the remarks after a briefing Mugabe gave to Zimbabwean reporters at the end of last week's summit of the continentwide African Union.

U.S. Embassy officials in Zimbabwe and Ethiopia, where Assistant Secretary of State Johnnie Carson is visiting, would not comment on the remarks.

According to the Herald paper, Mugabe said nothing came out of those talks.

"You wouldn't speak to an idiot of that nature. I was very angry with him, and he thinks he could dictate to us what to do," Mugabe was quoted as saying.

He said regional leaders supported the formation of a power-sharing government in February and then "you have the likes of little fellows like Carson saying 'do this, do that'."

"Who is he? I hope he is not speaking for Obama. I told him he was a shame, a great shame being an African American," Mugabe was quoted as saying.

Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai, head of the former opposition, visited President Barack Obama in Washington last month as part of a trip to the United States and Europe to re-engage with Western leaders after a decade of Zimbabwean isolation.

Mugabe is known for vitriolic outbursts against his critics, reserving some of his harshest comments for those who, like Carson, are black.

Mugabe labeled Carson's predecessor, Jendayi Frazer, who is also black, as "that little girl trotting around the globe like a prostitute" to campaign against him.

Frazer had criticized Mugabe's party over political violence and vote rigging surrounding disputed national elections in March 2008.

The pro-Mugabe state media launched repeated attacks against former U.S. Ambassador James McGee, who is also black, describing him as a "house Negro" for white Western leaders.

In typical language used by Mugabe, he has called former British Prime Minister Tony Blair a "B-Liar."

Before Tsvangirai joined the coalition government, Mugabe had referred to him as "Fat Cheeks" and a tea boy, a lowly domestic worker.

On Friday, McGee, whose left Zimbabwe for a three-year tenure, promised more U.S. support for the country's political and economic recovery but said democratic reforms needed to be in place first.

McGee, a harsh critic of Mugabe's autocratic rule, rejected the idea that Zimbabwe needed more support from donors to restore the rule of law, respect for human rights and to guarantee basic freedoms of speech and association.

"It doesn't cost anything ... to have judges apply the law equally. Dropping phantom politically motivated prosecutions is free. Stopping the arrests of political activists and independent journalists is also free," McGee said in a farewell speech.
